Scholarship Scams

During your senior year of high school, you may notice the volume of mail you receive substantially increases. Offers from colleges and universities, financial agencies and companies that guarantee college scholarships for just $39.99! Annually, scholarship scams take millions of dollars from unsuspecting students. Government attorneys investigating fraud in scholarship search services offer these six clues to identify “scholarship scams.”

- They ask for money. A legitimate scholarship does not require a fee to apply.
- They offer a money back guarantee. Most guarantees have restrictions that are impossible to meet.
- They claim to have access to information that can't be found anywhere else. The same scholarships are listed in dozens of free databases, directories and catalogs, as well as online.
- They ask for a credit card or bank account number. Never give out this information. You might unknowingly sign up for automatic withdrawals that you cannot stop – only the organization can stop automatic withdrawals. It might be months before you notice and contacting the organization is difficult.
- They claim they will do all the work. For most scholarships, the applicant must fill out and submit the application themselves. All they do is perform a search of free databases that you can do yourself.
- They congratulate you on winning a contest you never entered or for being selected by a national foundation.

If you didn't apply for it – you didn't win it.

Now that you know what to look for, it's easy to not get taken in by scholarship scams. Just use common sense and do your own research. This scholarship directory is a great place to start!

A) While the U.S. Department of Education encourages filing the FAFSA online—due to a lower error rate and faster processing time—a paper version is available by calling (800) 433-3242. You may request up to three forms. In addition, a PDF version of the FAFSA will be available at www.FederalStudentAid.ed.gov. From there you can access the PDF, complete the form by computer or hand, and mail it to the address provided for processing.

Q) When will I know if I have been awarded a scholarship from East Texas Communities Foundation?
